

ROOF STORM DAMAGE CHECKLIST

ROOF

When assessing the storm damage around your house, it's essential to walk the perimeter of your home and note any visible signs.

You might also have a good view from one of your windows. Keep a list or take pictures for later reference - this can be helpful with insurance purposes! Record anything you find that is not normal: dented, torn, or curled shingles are some examples.

GUTTERS, VENTS, AND WINDOWS

You should check all windows and other accessories on your home for any cracks, broken glass, weather-stripping damage, or torn screens.

OUTSIDE AREAS

Once the hurricane has passed, carefully walk around your home and check for any fallen tree limbs, missing fence posts, or damage to lawn furniture. You should also examine the flat surfaces such as patios, decks, and other exterior decorations like awnings that may have been hit by hail during last night's storm.

ATTIC AND CEILINGS

When inspecting your roof, look out for any signs of leaks or water spots. While you may not see damage on the exterior, wind and hail can cause unseen damage that could lead to more significant problems down the road.

Ensure every area is inspected, including ceilings, light fixtures, and even in hidden areas like attics where there might be a slight chance of seeing them with just torches/flashlights as it's dark inside those places too!
